What is it that's so intriguing about the approach of a New Year? It's one occasion marked by every nation that has civilization and sense enough to celebrate a holiday. Of course, every country doesn't ring in the new and ring out the old on the same date. But everywhere there is a festival of some kind for the beginning of a New Year.

Probably it's the idea of wiping the old slate clean and making a fresh start that appeals to human beings everywhere. Psychologists tell us that the human slate can never be wiped clean, that experiences and impressions once gained can never be completely lost. But a fresh start can always be made. All that is needed is discontent with old ways and habits and a determination to change.

A very happy trait is brought out at New Years.

People are looking forward. Do not recapitulate the resolutions they made last year, most of which have fallen by the wayside. New Year's Day and particularly New Year's Eve, is traditionally a light-hearted event, undimmed by remorse or over the mistakes, shortcomiugs and bad luck of the previous year. After all, what other human emotion is as sterile and unproductive as remorse? None.

Thus at New Year's, with its well meant but ephemeral resolutions, humanity symbolizes its forward-looking attitude, it's hope for a better future, and for progress in every way.

For we who live in the chaotic aftermath of the second and greatest world war, this human faith and hope for the future may appear asinine. From the millions who survived in Europe, civilization has been taken. They grovel in garbage heaps for food to sustain an existence so miserable that its price in humiliation and agony seems too great.

But humanity is very young. The emotions of the jungle still powerful in the race, and technological development, have enabled it to bring about the disastrous world tragedies that are war. Humankind is still young on the face of the earth and the present struggles, shot with passion and stupidity, may yet in the future bring forth a far, far better world for men and women.

And it is with this hope that all men face the New Year—with the hope that somehow it will be better and happier than the one past. And this faith gives the courage to go on with the struggle. Modern life frequently seems like the perpetual solving of a continuous and ever-changing series of problems. In this situation, perhaps the best gift a human being can have for the New Year is an alert equilibrium, adjusted to the constant thought and effort needed for trying to master the complex problems of the 20th century, yet sufficiently relaxed not to yield to the tremendous strains effected by the swift pace of our time.

SALES STEALS SHERIFF'S GUN KIDNAPS WOMAN

NEVADA CITY: Sheriff Carl J. Tobiassen, with Walter A. Sales back in jail after his escape Saturday morning, stated he would sign a complaint charging Sales with jail breaking. Sales was trusty serving time for breaking his parole.

The sheriff said that Sales stole a revolver, a 45 automatic from his office desk, went to a telephone booth on Broad street, summoned a taxi from Grass Valley, driven by Knecttle and went back to Truckee. He entered the round house there, intimidated four men and again carried off Mrs. Mary Giovanonni in the taxi. This time Knecttle, sensing that hsi passenger was dangerous, pleaded that his engine was burning up and drove into a service station for oil. The officers nabbed Sales while the car was being serviced.

Deputy Sheriff H. H. Hodson returned Sales to the county jail shortly after noon yesterday.

Sales was first in trouble with the law several weeks ago when he was charged with kidnaping Mrs. Giovanonni. The charge was dismissed following a preliminary hearing in which Mrs. Giovanonni according to the district attorney, failed to show conclusively that she was kidnaped. However, Sales was returned to jail at that time because he broke conditions of his parole.

Clemens Pottery case, which extended the portal to portal principle to include all time spent on the employers premises occupied in preparation for the day's work. The union statement said that action would be taken for all miners whether or not they were members of the union.

CSES IS JOB CLEARING HOUSE

GRASS VALLEY: Procedures by which the Grass Valley office of the California State Employment Service assists the employer to fill job vacancies and the job-seeker to find the employment best suited to his qualifications, were explained today by A. Piedmonte, manager of the local office.

"Matching men and women with jobs is the primary function of the employment service," Piedmonte declared. "When we have made a successful placement we have been of assistance to both the employer and the employee. This is the basic objective of the California State Employment Service.

When an individual is out of a job, the manager said, he first registers with the employment service to establish the fact that he is available for employment. A CSES interviewer offers him referral to such openings as his training, experience, will and physical capacity enable him to fill. If not suitable jobs are immediately available to him, he may then file his claim for unemployment insurance benefits.

The CSES official pointed out that since his office is a clearing house for job information, workers seeking employment can save themselves trouble by starting their search for a job there. By contacting the CSES workers can find out what available jobs appeal most strongly after consideration of personal requirements.

"The employer fits into the picture by listing his job openings with the employment service and specifying the qualifications needed to fill the vacancy. By placing their orders with the CSES for workers, employers will save themselves much time and effort because our trained interviewers carefully select the applicants best qualified for the position before referring them to the employer," Piedmonte declared.

The Grass Valley office of the California State Employment Service is located at 111 Auburn Street and the telephone number is 940.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

New Year's Day is so useful an occasion, so handy for a lot of things, that it is the only holiday observed around the entire world by people of every race, creed and clime. Every man Jack of us makes so many mistakes in any given year and fails to make good on so many resolutions of accomplishment and conduct bravely entered into at its beginning that when December wears away he can't help rejoicing at the prospect of a fresh, clean start.

To be sure, New Year's Day is a reminder that one more twelvemonth of life is used up, and the future store, uncertain at best, is dwindling. Yet even such reflection is not without its dash of consolation at times—say if a man has just had a tiff with the wife, dropped a double sawbuck on a saunter-ing nag, discovered his car battery is dead and he can't get a new one and been informed by medical adviser that his teeth must come out.

However it all may add up philosophically the world just has to have the life of that fresh start once per annum. The Jewish New Year is one of the most ancient. The ancient Egyptians began their year on September 21, the Greeks on June 21. The Chinese have another day. Probably so do the Hottentots, for all we know. Apparently it isn't the calendar date that matters particularly—it's the principle of the thing.

And so, in the positive conviction that the institution of this holiday is a very fine thang and the hope that 1947 will be a 365-day series of successes and good breaks, we wish to one and all the Happiest New Year ever!

Parent Problems

Helping the Anxious Child

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

AMONG the many thousands of letters I have received from parents since Pearl Harbor, there have not been nearly so many of them relating to anxieties in children as one might have expected. The following letter does not appear to be connected directly with the war.

"Dear Dr. Myers:—My 7½ year old daughter is beginning to show signs of being worried and full of fears just as I myself am and as my own mother is also. My mother's health has never been good, and she always has been such a worrier over things big or little. Looking back as a child, I believe I was aware of her fear; (fearing electrical storms, going to town alone, etc.).

"So, now I realize I am too much like that myself . . . I've always been a nervous type with an overdose of fear. I sometimes feel I can't go shopping alone or, in a crowd, I am nervous; oh, all the usual nervous feelings nervous people get. I'm telling you this so you will know why I'm really anxious for my child.

Missing the Bus

"During all her first grade, her main worry was missing the bus to and from school. If the family (I have a 2½ year old son) takes a short automobile trip she's afraid we won't know the way back home. While we are down town and I leave the car to go in a store, she doesn't want to stay in the car alone, says she is afraid I won't come back. My nurse tells me when I've gone to visit a friend for a short time she says, 'Suppose mother never comes back, what would we do?' and expresses her worry in some way. Yet her teacher told me last year she was the happiest child she had. Knowing how my mother is and how I am, I want to do anything I can to prevent her being so dependent and scared of going ahead in life. A self-addressed stamped envelope is enclosed."

As this mother herself observes, it is easy to see that her child has lived in an atmosphere of anxiety. This mother is quite correct in assuming that she and her mother need to conquer their own anxieties for this child's sake, if not for their own.

No Easy Task

Of course, we know they have no easy task, having been so long practiced at fretting and worrying. I did suggest to her that she might work in two directions: 1. To seek more interests and recreation which are cheerful and hopeful, read and see more that will make her laugh, and get lost in helping some other persons to be happy. 2. To guard herself, especially in that child's presence, against giving free expression to the anxieties she has.

As for the child, it is encouraging that she seems to be happy with other children. Normal mingling with playmates at wholesome fun could hardly be equaled as a corrective measure.

Sending her my special bulletin, "Fear," I also suggested she try to see that this child has ample sleep and rest, be kept from exposure to the fearful and exciting in stories, radio programs and in movies; that moreover, she help this child to be self-reliant, looking after herself, also helping about the house.

This announcement was made following a special meeting of the executive council on December 19 at which time it was felt that the current appeal for funds had reached the point where this action could be taken without jeopardizing the financial structure of the council.

The regional scout office in Los Angeles, has been notified of the board action with the hope that a leader will be available for employment starting February 1.

The four major districts of the Tahoe area council, Boy Scouts of America have elected officers for 1947 in preparation for the annual council meeting on Sunday, January 19. Veterans' News

Veteran students or trainees who work extra hours at the same job during the Christmas holidays are not required to include the additional money earned as a part of their income when reporting earnings to the veterans administration, VA said here today.

All veterans in school or training are required to make a report of earnings regularly. Under law, VA may not pay subsistence allowances to veterans when such payments will bring income above $200 for veterans with dependents or $175 without dependents.

VA said under law the only compensation a veteran is not obligated to report is pay for work classified as "occasional overtime" which is defined as the overtime beyond the standard dork week of the veteran. However he is required to include in his report of earnings regularly scheduled overtime.

If the veteran works at the same job, but during the Christmas season works longer hours, the excess above the normal work period is considered occasional overtime and need not be reported.

However VA pointed out a veteran who is not regularly employed and who takes a job during the Christmas holidays must report his earnings to the VA to be considered in any subsequent adjustment of his subsistence allowance which may be necessary. A veteran who takes a job other than his regular employment also is required to report.

Veterans who wish to use their terminal leave bonds as payment on their national service or U. S. government life insurance may now get the necessary assignment forms from their nearest VA office, the VA announced.

Qualified VA employees are on hand in all VA offices to assist veterans in assigning their bonds and to give them up to date information regarding their GI insurance.

Although VA does not issue terminal leave bonds, the armed forces leave act of 1946 authorized VA to accept the bonds in connection with government life insurance payments.

The bonds may be used as follows:

1 To pay premiums on insurance already in force.

2 To purchase new insurance.

3 To reinstate lapsed insurance.

4 To pay the amount required when converting to permanent insurance policies.

5 To repay policy loans made prior to July 31.

When a bond is used for insurance premium payments, VA said, any balance above the amount necessary to make the desired payment will be credited to the veteran's account and will be used for the purpose of future premium payments. However the veteran can specifically request that the balance be held until the maturity date of the bond at which time it will be refunded in cash without interest.

When the veteran assigns his bond he will receive credit for its face value plus interest accruing up to the end of the month in which the assignment is made.

Under the law a veteran cannot indirectly cash his bonds now by investing them in insurance and then cashing his policy.

Assignment of the bonds will not increase a policy's cash value until the bonds have matured.

January is the coolest month in San Francisco.

A Letter on Christian Brotherhood — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Philemon.

With his own hand Paul wrote a letter to his friend Philemon, who lived in Colosse, a city of Asia Minor, interceding for Philemon's runaway slave, Onesimus.

Paul sent the letter he had written by Onesimus, who had stolen from his master, Philemon, but had been converted by Paul and was now his devoted attendant.

Paul's letter was addressed to, "Philemon, our dearly beloved . . . to our beloved Apphia (Philemon's wife), and Archippus (his son), our fellow soldier, and to the church in thy house."

In his letter Paul asks that Philemon receive Onesimus, "not now as a servant, but above a servant, a brother beloved, specially to me."

CAFETERIA OPENS AFTER VACATION

Although many factors are still indefinite the high school careteria will open early in January, so as to serve to the students during the bad winter season. Prices will probably be about 20c or 25c per meal and student help and supervision will be greatly needed to really make the cafeteria a success.

Necessary space has been provided for preparing the meals but as yet the stage is the only possibility for the temporary lunch room and the stage will be used until more suitable arrangements can be made.

PLACER HILLMEN DEFEAT VARSITY 30-19

Early last week in a practice game against the Placer Hillmen, the varsity was defeated 30-19. Although the game was none too fast the Jackets used "man-to-man" and zone defenses effectively against the towering Placer five.

Scorers of the day was Coley of Nevada City with 6, and Pechees and Cain of Placer with 8 and 6 respestively.

B TEAM LOSES TO FACULTY 24-30

In what was described as one of the toughest games this season was when the faculty defeated the Bees 30-24. Edward Frantz was high point man for the faculty with 15.

Films being shown around school are "Command Performance" and a picture by Walt Disney showing the homes of yesterday, today and tomorrow, featuring colo and the story of light. Others are "Give Us This Day" a story on the history of bread making and special pictures on vitamins and mathematics.

All of those artistic scenes used in the Christmas program last Thursday night, were made by Warren Immel and Mrs. Doris Foley of the elementary school.

Needles flew, pounding and other queer noises issued from the crafts classes all of last week. It seems that all the students were doing last few finishing touches on many nice Christmas gifts such as wallets, key cases, belts, cigaret cases, knife sheaths and many very nice purses.

ELKS GIVE 28 TIERS OF WOOD FOR CHRISTMAS

GRASS VALLEY: Many homes were warmed on Christmas Day by wood distributed by the Grass Valley Elks and donated by the New Colma Lumber Company. Twenty eight tiers were distributed.

AUTO CLUB URGES CARE IN TRAFFIC

Traffic accidents will exait a staggering toll of death and injury during the coming holiday season, unless all motorists and pedestrians join in the current statewide safety drive spearheaded by the state department of motor vehicles. Full cooperation in this accident prevention campaign which has for its slogan "Don't Let Death Take Your Holiday," is being given by the automobile association.

With holiday shopping now in ful swing, highways and streets are crowded with motorists and pedestrians, it is pointed out and only by exercising utmost care in driving and walking can the threatened increase in traffic accidents be prevented.

Factors contributing to the high accident rate in December include shorter daylight hours, rainy weather, crowded streets and highways, careless walking, driving at speeds inconsistent with safety under prevailing conditions and driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Grand Teton national park was created February 26, 1929.

CHRISTMAS FORMAL GREAT SUCCESS

With "White Christmas" as the theme, this years Christmas formal started out and proved to be one of the most outstanding social events this fall. Twyla Smart, senior candidate became queen and presided over events including the grand march, which was led by the queen elect and her escort Ed Frantz.

A glittering Christmas tree decked with decoration and colored lights adorned the center of the floor giving off the only light in the room, with the exception of the band stand spaced at intervals along the wall were great wreaths of evergreen and holly berries with a gaily decoated punch bar in one corner. The punch was made by Mrs. Robinson's foods classes.

Sixty per cent of the grazing in California national forests is done by deer.

75 YEARS AGO

Born at Gold Flat on December 15, 1871 to the wife of Owen Dougherty twin daughters.

Frank Guild had leased the building on Commercial Street, formerly occupied by Dr. Kent as a drugstore, and had fitted it up in nice style for an oyster saloon. Lower portion of the building was to be used by gentlemen and the upper part was for the accommodation of the ladies.

The Star Quartz Mining Co. in Washington sold all of their property to John R. Ragin of San Francisco. The former owners were residents of this city.

Hon. A. A. Sargent left this city for a few days visit in Sacramento and San Francisco before his departure for Washington, D. C.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Nevada County National Bank the following officers were leoted: John W. Hinds, president; R. W. Tully, cashier; James Whartenby, R. W. Tully, M. L. Marsh, Jonathan Clark, Chas. Marsh, A. H. Parker and John W. Hinds, directors.

The city was visited by a severe storm, twelve inches of snow falling within forty eight hours and the wind blowing such a gale that all buildings were shaken so as to frighten most residents and making sleep impossible. There was more water in Deer Creek than had been observed for many years. All telegraph lines in every direction were down.

At a concert at the Methodist Church the following residents were roundly applauded for their parts: Miss Anna Glasson, Miss Kate Edwards, John Glasson, W. G. Stiles and Charles Grimes in a mixed quartette 'Over the River'; Addie Gray in a solo and Charley Hinds in a recitation.

Bell returning from a trip to the English Mountain Mine, were severely shaken up and bruised when the hind wheel of their rock-away went over a soft shoulder in the road near the top of the Sugar Loaf grade, frightening the team which bolted and threw the three gentlemen. The team then dashed home to James Hennessey's stable, where they belonged, dragging the battered rock-away behind them and causing some concern for the three men who were able to walk to the residence of Dr. Hunt where they were attended by both Drs. Hunt and Muller.

Total rainfall for the season to date was 19.94 inches.
